The 2009-10 men’s basketball season is best characterized as “what could have been.” After coming off a 2008-09 season of 16-15, the expectations were high for another winning season. The 2009-10 finished the year at 15-16. The team was once again struck with the injury bug early in the season that depleted the guard lineup for the season. Two key contributors off the 2008-09 team were lost for the season. The schedule was a very difficult one under normal circumstances, but with the injuries it became even more difficult. The team lost some very close games which could have gone the other way with just one defensive stop or a made shot. Of the five sophomores who graduated, three went on to play at the next level. Both Abner Moreira and Russell Wilkinson are playing for Idaho State University, and James Moore signed to play at Morgan State University. The team was also very successful in the classroom as well. The team finished off the year with a cumulative GPA of 3.12 which ranked them second in the nation!
