REGISTRATION FOR CLASSES

Students should register for a course before attending the class.

The College establishes a period of early registration and sets aside one day before the beginning of each semester for students to register for classes. If students, however, do not register on that day, the College has an established period for late registration. After the period for late registration passes, students cannot enroll in a course.

REGISTRATION FOR CLASSES

Students should register and pay for classes before attending the first class. Students should register for classes during the early registration period or prior to the first day of classes. After the first day of classes, there is a period for late registration.

Before Registering

Students seeking a degree or certificate should complete the application process before registering.

Late Registration

Students can register late for a semester class during the first 3 class days of each semester. Late registration for block courses and certain non-credit courses, however, will vary.

Block Courses

— Eight-Week Block: Students may add these courses during the first 2 class days of the course.
— Five-Week Block: Students may add these courses during the first 2 days of the course.

Non-Credit Classes

For certain non-credit courses, students can register during the first class.

After the period for late registration passes, students may not enroll in a course. Exceptions are handled on a case-by-case basis and it should be referred to the Registrar's office for forwarding to appropriate Student Learning departments.
Flexible Entry

Full semester flexible entry courses, as designed by Curriculum Committee action, may be added through the designated last day to drop.
